

Finance Manager

Are you looking for an opportunity to grow quickly in a dynamic start-up environment? Do you want to work on both strategic analytical projects and everyday finance tasks? Are you keen to be part of a team tackling one of the greatest health challenges of our time? Then this is a role for you!

About Evira

Evira is a Swedish start-up building solutions for behaviour-related diseases with customers in Sweden and the UK.

Our core products include a communication, recommendation and admin tool for paediatric obesity treatment which is also used as a SaaS for private weight loss providers. Paediatric centres using Evira can treat twice as many patients with twice as good average results. Read more about our research here.

We are currently 10 people with mixed backgrounds in healthcare and engineering. We strive to deliver products that we are proud of and continually invest in building qualitative products and performing clinical evaluations.

What you'll do

As our Finance Manager, you will play a key role in all finance-related aspects of our business. Working closely with our Co-founder & CEO, you'll:

- Lead budgeting and forecasting processes
- Create and present materials for the Board of Directors and investors
- Oversee financial reporting, project management, and other analytical tasks
- Collaborate with our external bookkeeping firms to ensure accurate and efficient accounting
- Manage invoicing, accounts payable/receivable, and general administration (with support from our external provider)
- Improve internal processes, including BI tools (Excel, Python, etc.)
- Support key strategic decisions by providing data-driven insights

This is a broad and hands-on role—one day, you may be managing simpler administrative tasks, and the next, you'll be analyzing financial models to support strategic decisions.

About you

- You have some experience in a finance, controller, or business role—perhaps in a start-up or a fast-paced environment
- You take pride in your work, are eager to learn, and conscientious
- You speak and write Swedish and English proficiently
- You're proficient in Excel (or eager to master it) and open to learning new tools like Fortnox, Xero, Google Sheets, Python, or other BI tools
- You're comfortable wearing many hats and enjoy collaborating with various teams

- You have a genuine or growing interest in healthcare and want to contribute to a solution that improves people's lives

Why Evira?

We are a small company with a strong team spirit and ambitious growth aspirations. Your voice matters, and the work you do will have a real impact as it enables us to reach more users and thereby improve their quality of life. With our different backgrounds, you can trust us when we say you can never predict where the lunchroom conversation might lead! We have fun together and take pride in our work. We believe in quality in everything we do, whether it's in software through testing or in healthcare through clinical studies. Working hours and office time are generally flexible. At Evira you will have competitive compensation for the work you do and a great opportunity for professional development!

How to apply?

Curious about the role? Send your CV and a short introduction (why you're excited about joining Evira) to work@evira.se. We're interviewing candidates on an ongoing basis—so apply today!

Position: Full-time, on-site in Stockholm

Location: Triewaldsgränd 2, 111 29 Stockholm

We look forward to receiving your application and potentially welcoming you to Evira!

